

Miguel Luna Romero - Writing Center Coordinator and Business Professor

Miguel Luna was born in Escacena, a small town in the province of Huelva. That's why he considers himself a redneck but he is quite proud of it.

Miguel received his degree in English philology from the University of Seville in 1993, and began teaching Spanish to international students a year later at a center for adult education in Minneapolis. Miguel also taught English to South American immigrants in the same center. When he came back from the States, he joined the army for a year where he taught illiterate people how to read and write. Hence he realized he wanted to devote his life to teaching. Then he worked for Ave, the High Speed Train, which links Seville to Madrid for a few years. In the meantime, he started to study his doctorate courses in Second Language Acquisition. Since 2003, Miguel has worked as a Spanish professor with CIEE. Since his arrival at CIEE, he has become involved in the coordination of a variety of CIEE academic activities, such as the Writing Center, our tutoring program, the On- Line Placement Test, the Tandem Project and the organization of various workshops for students in the programs.

Miguel's other important passions are music, books & cinema. So much, he loves going to the movies and dancing.
